POPULATION STUDIES AND HISTOLOGY OF THE GASTROINTESTINAL TRACT – BIG HISTOLOGY, BIG DATA?

Professor Marjorie Walker

Professor of Anatomical Pathology, School of Medicine and Public Health (Pathology), University of Newcastle

Marjorie Walker is Professor of Anatomical Pathology at the University of Newcastle, and an Honorary Staff Specialist at John Hunter Hospital. Her research specialises in gastrointestinal pathologies in functional bowel disease. Population studies of GI pathology in the community have paved the way to explain and define these disorders. She is a major contributor to global coeliac disease guidelines, including definitions, management and diagnosis, transitioning of paediatric patients to adult care and clinical trials of treatment.
